The 1974-75 Renaissance was printed by the Taylor Publishing Co., Dallas, Texas.

The book was produced in a 10" x 10" format page size, 276 pages Smyth sewn in 12 page signatures. Paper stock was 80 lb. high bulk dull enamel. All half tones are spot varnished and all color prints were four color separations made from 35mm transparencies layed out in 8 flats. The end sheet's color is Fawn printed in 70% screen. Pages 2 and 3 consist of Dark Green #20, also printed in 70% screen with the type reversed. All borders for the almanac sections were made with Letraset decorative borders #83-120 and the type for those sections were Letraset 72 pt. Quentin #117-72-CN.

The cover consists of .098 pt. board stock with white vinyl #088 plain. Lettering is Brown #881 thermo-screened for effect.

With the asset of hindsight and the liability of subjectiveness, we on the yearbook staff have more or less defined, as clearly as possible, the mood on the URI campus during the academic year 1974-75. That mood, however intangible it may be, has become clear to us as one of optimism.

R. Emerson

Looking back on prior academic years, there were obvious prevailing 'moods' on campus. 1970 was a year in which such a mood can be clearly defined. It was the year of revolution and a definite pessimism with the system. A year later, the pessimistic attitude prevailed, mixed with a feeling of being generally fed up with everything. The next two years were rampant with apathy. There were no more causes, and there was basic disillusionment. Life went on, as people became involved with the details of their lives.

R. Emerson

Watergate, a year later, seemed like just another pain in the ass, although we concerned ourselves with the details of our lives, we nevertheless were concerned with the big issue once again, this time with a lot more cynicism. There was a lot to be dealt with, as it became clear that idealism was a thing of the past and corruption was a tangible reality.

C. Margeson

R. Emerson

We "young people", in an effort to shirk all thoughts of what plagued many of the people of our land, symbolically stressed the triumph of innocence and, forgetting the problems that surrounded us, shed our clothes in the guise of streaking. We were once again being rebels, but in a different and more peaceful way.

Soon, the problems of Watergate were solved, and we turned to new prospects for the future. Hopefully, corruption would be cleaned up, and America and her people could roll up their sleeves and start anew. Here at URI, the fall semester began in earnest. In August, a new president was appointed in the country. Also in August, a new president came to the University of Rhode Island.

P. Kieras

P. Kieras

We are sure some will say we have been blind by assuming that all is well. We agree wholeheartedly that there have been inconsistencies, yet nevertheless, we have taken heart in the fact that the exceptions to the rule did not alter the mood. Look around and you'll see what we saw: optimism in even the darkest corners of life at URI.

As the American people looked to Gerald Ford for support, so did the students here at URI look to Frank Newman to help us wade through mistakes of the past and to start fresh. Perhaps we have been plagued by budget deficits and a multitude of new problems, but for the most part, fingers have been crossed and life has been bearable, with the hope that things will get progressively better.

The Gift

Moontides, sunstorms
galactal dancing, the lifeforms sway throughout the universe exploding into being like stars shedding their light-skins.

Earthmen busy themselves with linear lives,
while little boys on Saturn draw rings around the moon —

Astrology beckons from the closet:
arise, Sagittarius, shoot your flaming arrow into my heart, filling me with the light of ten thousand suns;
the time has come for learning.

As the calendar revolves on its floating axis
we too slide through the seasons carrying with us the residue that is memory:

Our lives flow with the tides,
blood pulled through our veins
by moonbeams

Our bodies move with the seasons, the soul's fruit ripens, slips off the Tree, and is digested, food for the Universe. — Stuart Blazer

Believing It Is Enough

In the depths of my mind
there exist inner paradoxes

Straining my brain
with unusual power

I have a want to —
— to — get it all together

Believing in what I know just isn't enough

Do I wish to be reassured
of all these things

No, just believing should be enough and it will be enough.

Academics

Academia is flourishing at URI. According to statistics, more students are receiving A's than in previous years. The situation looks hopeful, even at URI, party school that it is.

Hard as it may seem to picture oneself and one's comrades as being studious, the trend is there. History books are becoming more readable, and economic principles are becoming more interesting to sift through.

Due to post-Watergate disillusiones, a new optimism seems to have surfaced, and with it, a hard-line attitude towards work.

Disgusting as it may seem, it is better to be educated when you're paying for it than to party when you're paying for an education. Sure, the partying still goes on, but there is a healthy balance, and, believe it or not, the consensus is that URI students are normal, stable students.

Perhaps gung-ho party-goers will fail to agree, but even Paddy Murphy, dead and buried in March from excess of drink and parties, has nothing over those people who come to URI for an education and manage to sift one out of all the liquor and laziness. At least the sheepskin they receive in June will have a little meat on it.

The 74 book came out in September, and flocks of lost lambs came to pick them up.

It's funny — being from the inside and watching. The reactions were varied. Ranging from radiant smiles at seeing one's own face decently photographed, to screams from an egocentric photographer who didn't get his nudes published in the book, we were appalled at the silver and black book. It enclosed our work, our sweat, our deadlines and our headaches. And for the few people we saw who appreciated it, it made it worth it for us to do it again.

FALL THEATRE

by Stephen Andrade

Something about the seeming independence of the theater is shattered when I realize that no matter how good or bad a play is, the script is just a piece of literature, and the Drama Company means people who act. Neither stand on their own, they balance. But what comes first, the good script or the good actor?

The Theater cannot simply rely on a great script. Greek classics which should by now be the most worn out plays in history, make big comebacks. Then new plays, written to express 20th century living and contemporary characters can't find the inside.

(Everybody is a critic, and I always lost true meaning in the interpretation, etc., etc., etc.) This means that even if the company shows a 2,000 year old epic, the actors' experience on stage is preyed upon.

So why is it that in America the unknown actor, artist and playwright are hungry and tired? What happened to the romantic Barrymore myth of drinking all night and rehearsing all day? It's a culture-starve.

Antigone

Someone once mentioned that the best experimentation with new work, as often as it may happen, occurs in the catacombs beyond the vomitory. And the best audience for this work is the young and innocent, because to them, it's all new anyways.

The environment for an exciting season of theater was just right here at URI, and before our university reached the bottom of the cultural rill, the Theater Department was awarded a grant from the National Rockefeller Foundation.

In a society where TV is the largest and most popular stage, where talented efforts of young artists are generally washed out in the mixed colors of advertising, and Americans rally to the sight of Mr. Clean and the Pillsbury Doughboy, URI has replied with an enriched season of plays.

"THE GREAT LEAKY WONDER BLUNDER," BETTER KNOWN AS THE WATER CRISIS

On a dreary day in late November, many of us were preparing for class, unaware of the blessing in disguise that was about to bestow itself upon us. Sure, our existence, usually an uninterrupted routine, had been lightly messed up for a while in the morning — some of us had no water and a few of the toilets were acting up in stinky rebellion. Nevertheless, we dragged ourselves to class, thinking that some demagogue in housing or plumbing would undoubtedly utilize his talents to alleviate the problem, and that the excitement, like all week-day excitement at URI, would be short-lived.

The day was drizzly and rainy. The people at the Physical Plant were making frantic phone calls, and there was some commotion in front of the infirmary as workmen dug a mysterious hole. Meanwhile, the student body went on with their affairs of the day, oblivious to the fact that somewhere in the land of the water-god, plans were being formulated for their escape from Kingston.

By afternoon, the rumor had begun. There was a water main break . . . at the library . . . at the infirmary . . . no food . . . no water . . . no showers . . . no school. Naturally, nothing as impossibly utopian as having school cancelled occurred in the minds of most of us. Pessimists scoffed at the idea, and yet, some optimists began packing for home. By evening, the optimists had won, and all of us were more than elated. The next day, while everyone either loafed around or caught up on lost work, long tank trucks filled with water were dispatched and arrived on campus. Later, 90 port-o-johns appeared (thanks a lot, water-god) and the people at the Physical Plant were biting their fingernails.

Then, the announcement came. Glory Hallelujah, no classes for the rest of the week. Professors cursed the god of water; students got down on their knees and gave thanks. When the praying and celebrating were over, the campus was empty. Everyone took off to decent toilets at home, leaving the problem behind for the people at the Physical Plant to contend with.

Good things never last forever. By the following week, we were back in class, being told by many of our professors that we would have to take notes at a faster rate and that some of our classes would be made up at night and on Saturdays. In addition, Frank Newman later announced that the total cost of the crisis would probably run to $70,000. Obviously, it does not pay to pray to the water-god.

WRIU

by Steven Carcieri

This past year at the campus radio station many monumental events took place. There were records broken, officers of the station impeached and resigned, public notice given of a request for a power increase to 3000 watts stereo, and a full day's conference on the student station's objectives.

The main event of the first semester had to be the breaking of the New England broadcast record by Jeff Yencho. (He would have gone for the world record, but the person who had achieved that dubious honor in New York by staying on the air for 192 hours had to be committed to a hospital and lost the use of his legs in the process. Eight days was too long for that disc jockey, and Jeff said "no way" in his response to going for the world mark.)

I'll never forget the week that he was on the air. He started Monday morning and by Tuesday night he looked crazy. During my show on A.M. his speaker was blasting in F.M. When I went over for an observation, I found that the window was wide open, letting in all that cold October night air, and he was stripped to the waist. He went on to capture his mark of 100 hours with about five hours to spare. He gave WRIU some of the best publicity it had ever had.

Later in the year, one new director was impeached, and Dana Swanson, general manager, resigned for personal reasons.

On April 15, members of the radio station met for a day of discussion and future planning for the station.

Finally, WRIU F.M. gave public notice that they had filed a request with the F.C.C. to change frequencies and expand their power output from 10 watts (hello Wakefield) to 3000 watts stereo (hello Providence maybe). This was the first step towards increasing our sphere of influence in the state. This is a dream that must become a reality. It just may improve the image of this university and demonstrate how together we are in Kingston.

(Steve Carcieri is a disc jockey for WRIU)

JEFF ALBANESE WAS STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT AT URI DURING
THE 1974-75 ACADEMIC YEAR.

During the period that I have spent as an undergraduate at URI I have often wondered in what way students could become a truly effective voice in the governance of the university. Although there have been occasional bright spots of student activism that insured the protection of students rights at URI, they have been inconsistent. Consequently, students have suffered.

The main problem in accomplishing the acquisition of a truly effective student voice, in my opinion, has been the lack of cohesiveness and community among students at this university. I feel that the formation of a community among students is extremely important if students are interested in having a strong voice — a voice that is essential in standing up to the problems of increased fees and reduced services made inevitable by the economic problems of our country.

Unfortunately, students at URI seem to be concerned with only the welfare of all students in such crucial areas as the quality of the education they are receiving, expressing their views on what the priorities of the university should be, being vocally concerned about increases in tuition and fees during these financially difficult times, and, especially, being able to actively participate in university decision making on a consistent basis.

I am not stating that these students should disregard their own lifestyles for the sake of other students, but I do feel that they should not be obsessed with just this faction of their life. Students should be aware of each other's needs generally and should unite to attempt to solve a common problem rather than remain in their split groups.

In other words, if we can strive to create and develop a policy of concern for the problems of all students, whether they be academic enthusiasts, dorm advocate or commuters or have a love of Greek life maybe then we can work together to accomplish our goals of achieving the best total education possible, not only in the tradition of a land grant institution, but in the best interest of all students.

HOSTEL

This year, for the first time, URI has a house in which commuters and other people connected with the University can spend the night on campus. This house, located on Rt. 138 by the tennis courts is called the URI Hostel. As the only hostel in the state of Rhode Island, the house fits eighteen people a night and the occupancy averages about twenty people a week, proving the need of such a service at URI.

The Hostel eliminates the inconvenience of commuting home at night after a party or late-night studying in the library. This house makes social events on campus much more open to commuters, which in turn helps to break down any sort of alienation which might exist between commuters and residents. The Hostel is also used by friends of residents who wish to stay overnight at URI. During the winter semester break, the house was used by the basketball team for a meeting.

The rates are fifty cents a night with a sleeping bag and seventy-five cents a night for a bed. This money goes to maintenance of the Hostel such as repairs, electricity, and heat.

Maurice and Sue Tougas are the live-in couple at the Hostel at the University of Rhode Island. It is a homey atmosphere with two white rabbits and a dog in the back yard.

This campus is vast and unlimited. It is my home and my warm fireplace. It is my city, teeming with wrongdoings and insecurities. It is my life, with its immature moments and its moments of truth.

There are no real boundaries to my education here, yet at times I feel fenced in, imprisoned. Here, I have felt inspired with intellect, and intent upon nauseous insignificance.

This campus has kindled the fires of great minds, and yet has fathered children it is not proud of. It has taught me through the guidance of the words of great men. It has interlaced my classroom existence with touches of personal experience, from which I have captured the essence of life.

A. Lisi

The lessons I have learned here are many. The disillusionments I have met are many, yet, I have learned the ultimate lesson in life — how to deal with the realities and how to cherish the ideals. That, in itself, is a lesson I shall always keep in mind.

"THAT RAM BAND"

That Ram Band begins its season early in September before any students with the sense enough not to join the Ram Band even begins thinking about returning to URI.

The regime, from that day on, resembles induction into the army. Basic drills are washed into one's brain; a constant scheme of marching patterns.

R. Emerson

Primarily musicians, members of the Ram Band must also be acrobats and dancers. They must learn how to simultaneously swing their instruments in time to the music, memorize marching steps, and play melodious half-time music. It's like trying to rub your stomach and tap your head at the same time, or vice versa.

The humidity of the late fall soaks itself into the clothes of the marchers, and the heat is enough to make any trombone player faint. But that is remedied when salt tablets are passed out, and the endless marching resumes.

As the prospect of the first performance looms ahead, nervousness and psyche work their way into the veins of the members. After practicing for so long, a sense of unity dominates, and the desire to look good and play good mixed with a deep sense of pride — akin to the feeling that permeates a football locker room before a game — takes over.

Once on the field, all the drilling and practice serves invaluable. It's not really evident at first, as the music and the steps push each member around and into place at the right time, and the bleachers and Ramettes are nearly invisible blurs, and the person at the end of the line almost screws up the pattern, and the person at the beginning of the line isn't really playing his horn because he's too nervous, and all of a sudden it's all over. Then each person in that long line of blue and white looks up in disbelief. Then the female voice over the loudspeaker says, "That's our Ram Band," and the applause sounds faint but satisfying. The band leader announces his pleasure with the performance, and each drained marcher smiles an exhausted smile. It's definitely worth it. Then it's practice time once more, and the person at the end of the line learns his steps, and the horn player learns to play the horn.

RHODY FOOTBALL

To most of the student spectators on this campus, a Saturday afternoon football game begins when the players run onto the field at 2:00. But for a football player, the game on Saturday starts Monday night and continues throughout the week as the players workout on the field, study movies of their opponents in action, concentrate on a photo of their opposing player, watch their weight and intake of alcohol, shut the lights at 10:15 every night, and psyche themselves up for a severe physical beating on that big day.

Playing football is a full-time job. It takes all summer to prepare for the fall season, and all week to prepare for one game. The spectators often forget as they scream and swear from the sidelines that "our men" out there in blue and white are students, too. Not only must they answer to the spectators' demands to give 100% of themselves to the game, but they must also answer to the phys-ed department (who keeps tabs on their grades) to give 100% of themselves academically.

At times it is an up-hill battle after a few hours of pushups and hitting for the player to keep his eyes open long enough to catch a glimpse of his chemistry book. He must organize his time between studying and football and have enough self-discipline to stick with it.

R. Emerson

Emotion plays a big role in a game. A player only plays as well as he feels, and if he is emotionally stimulated before the game, then he will perform better with extra incentive. The football uniform means more to a player than just identification. It gives him a feeling of unity with his teammates and that much more confidence in himself. The drawback of the uniform is the protective helmets which hide their faces. This can too easily allow the spectators to forget that those uniforms are not battery operated, but actually have people in them: people with the same study problems — tests, papers, labs, and headaches that you and I have.

— M.T.N.

"This was the most satisfying and successful football season I've ever associated with in my 23 years of coaching."

That's University of Rhode Island coach Jack Gregory speaking after his Rams closed out the 1974 football campaign with a spectacular 14-13 victory over archrival Connecticut, the first win for a URI team at Storrs in 20 years.

"We had unbelievable problems this season, and with all the adversity these young fellows went through, the victory over Connecticut was the most gratifying and rewarding for any football team with which I've ever been associated."

"This team deserves a lot of credit. The way they came back to win in four of their last six games, after a disastrous start, points to the kinds of athletes they are. Most teams could have folded and given up on themselves, but they came back and played good football the last six games of the season.

"These young men showed us a lot of courage and character. We're very proud of them," Gregory concluded.

With the final 5-5 overall record and 3-3 in the Yankee Conference, Rhody put together two winning seasons in a row.

The star of the season and the talk of the campus was sophomore sensation Rich Remondino.

All this outstanding athlete from North Massapequa, N.Y. did was run! And run he did. . . with a total 1008 yards for the season in nine games, to win the Conference rushing crown, as the number one rusher in New England, and the first in the east after the season's final against UConn.

Remondino finished as the 16th best rushing back in the nation among all collegiate football players in all NCAA divisions.

Rich received numerous post-season honors. He was named to the Associated Press Little All-American team, and to the first teams of the All-East All-New England, and All-Yankee Conference squads.

Other top individual performers for the season were senior quarterback Paul Ryan, who finished his career with 1933 yards and 14 touchdown passes. In his final season, Ryan threw for 1009 yards, only the fourth QB in URI history to go over the 1000 yard mark. He also got his name in the all-time Ram record books with the most touchdown passes in one game, four against Northeastern. Danny Whitaker, senior fullback and tri-captain, finished his playing with 457 yards and eight touchdowns last year. Senior cornerback and tri-captain Ray Braszo set an all-time Ram career interception mark with eight. Also graduating is tight-end Mike Matkevich, who caught 55 passes for 781 yards and six touchdowns last year. He was chosen as first-team All-Yankee Conference.

The team will graduate 17 seniors, with 15 juniors, 18 sophomores and 24 freshmen on the 1974 varsity roster who are expected to return in 1975. Among the seniors who have played their final game for the Rams are tri-captain and linebacker Dave Zyons who will captain the Rhody baseball team in the spring; two-time All-Conference guard John Guoin, three-year letterman center Russ Pietrini, tackle Vin Sinagra, and runningback Paul Podgurski.

W. Merguerian

The Rams started off slowly, losing three of their first four games. In the home opener, national power-house Temple smashed Rhody 38-7. The following week, in one of the most exciting games ever seen at Meade Field, the Rams knocked off Northeastern 48-36. The combined total of 84 points was a new URI record.

Rhody then hit the skids, being blown away by Brown 45-15 at Providence. URI then took a thrashing from Maine at Orono, 29-19.

The Rams won the following week, much to the delight of the Homecoming crowd. In what was to be the last game ever between the two schools, Rhody white-washed Vermont 14-0. The Catamounts dropped the sport at the season's conclusion.

Before the largest home crowd of the year, a Parent's Day audience of 7,000, Rhody dropped a 17-7 decision to UMass. At home for the third consecutive week, the Rams knocked YanCon rival Boston University 13-7.

Travelling to New Hampshire, Rhody lost to the Wildcats 29-14. But, the Rams finished the season with two straight victories, at Bridgeport and UConn.

SOCCER

Led by the outstanding play of freshman Danny McCrudden, the University of Rhode Island soccer team finished its 1974 season with a record of 6-4-2, a big improvement from the season before.

McCrudden, of Nicholville, N.Y., emerged as the scoring threat the Rams so badly needed. The 6-3, 190 pound frosh won the Yankee Conference scoring race with 21 points on 13 goals and eight assists and finished among the top five scorers in New England.

McCrudden scored the lone goal in Rhody's 1-0 shocker over Connecticut in the final game of the season, spoiling the Huskies' chances for an undefeated season. The UConn's were ranked fourth nationally before the Rams pulled the upset of the soccer season.

McCrudden also played key roles in a pair of one-sided victories for the Rams. He scored four goals and added an assist in Rhody's 9-0 triumph over Holy Cross, and tallied three goals and three assists in the Rams' 7-0 clobbering of Providence College.

Rhody, coached by Geza Henni, doubled its record and its goal production from a season ago. The Rams finished a dismal 3-7-3 last year, while scoring 16 goals. This season's Rams tallied 32 goals, which ties a club record set in 1972.

Sophomore goalie Bob Auletta emerged as one of the big surprises of the year. He replaced the injured starting goalie Kevin Daly at mid-season and played strongly. In seven games, he allowed but five goals for an average of 0.7 per game. Auletta, of Massapequa, N.Y., finished the season strongly with a shut-out victory over UCon, totalling 42 saves, an average of six per contest.

Daly, the senior co-captain from Rockville, Center, N.Y., started in eight games for the Rams, allowing 1.5 goals per game. He recorded two shutouts and finished his career at Rhody with a 1.57 goals against average, while competing in four years of varsity activity.

Daly is one of three starters who are graduating. Also finishing their varsity competition are co-captain Vic Gaspar of East Providence, R.I., who had 20 goals and 16 assists in his career, and starting defenseman Ralph Maciera of Mt. Kisco, N.Y.

Kingston, R.I. hadn't seen much snow this winter. In fact, the local flavor had commented that it surely had been the mildest they'd experienced since the great Hessian snow storm of 1778 when so many Hessian soldiers died of cold and exposure. Some seemed to intend that it was all because of pollution and warmer temperatures. Some even went as far to infer a sort of decide, the Good Lord was warming Himself up for the big day. Apparently, even his images, as they thought themselves to be, pulled no weight in heavenly circles.

Despite the local flatulency, the snows did come and they blanketed our fair little town with all its splendidorous white-wash. Indeed, it really seemed to clean the place up a bit. Along with its flawless camouflage, it seemed to settle folks into a peaceful day. But Nature herself, the woman mother, is a fearful force to deal with. I knew her name when I was a young child, and partially remember it now. She nursed me in the fields and nurtured me in the woods.

So for the first time in many a year Kingston knew the violence of the season of snow. The cold and destitution it wrought contained itself in madman whirlwinds of winter. Bitter and steel-edged temperatures brought out the coldness in all of us. The snow battles began.

I thought sadly that it was the only way they could work the feeling of winter out. I could offer no more participation than to just sit by and look out my frosted window. Sullen hours of just watching and watching from my little window, never daring to go out.

But I never could sit by and watch forever. The snow-throwers made things inside me burn hot enough to melt an avalanche of snowballs. It was an incurable blindness that guided my movements. Wanting and needing compensation for that lost tunnel wandering deep within was an impulse. There was no need for violence, any where it decided to live or page. It didn't matter if my eyes were broken, because I never used them to see violence anyways.

INAUGURATION

The result of a long search for candidates for the presidency at URI: Frank Newman.

Mr. Newman was inaugurated on December 4, in a rather toned-down pomp and circumstantial ceremony. In addition, the inaugural ball, held on the previous night, was unlike most inaugural balls, in that the usual flamboyancy was also toned-down.

The highlight of the ceremonial events was the long-awaited inaugural speech.

Newman addressed a large assembly gathered in Keaney gym on a blustery inauguration day.

He spoke of the problems facing education today, and of the development of higher education in past years. He emphasized the past importance of "growth," and admitted that "bigger did not always mean better."

Newman suggested that standards and priorities of today's universities must be re-evaluated, including programs with a positive impact, nurturing creativity in the student, and a better management of resources. He stated, "Our prime purpose is not saving money. If we save our money and lose our soul, what good does it do? We must maximize the effects of education."

The ceremonies were followed by tours on all three campuses of academic programs.

B. Fuesz

B. Fuesz

When I embarked on an interview with Frank Newman, I kind of knew what to expect. John Hanlon, a columnist for the Providence Journal, called him "a quick, lithe man" who does "quick interviews." It is commonly known that Newman sometimes works from 7 A.M. until 10 P.M., or later. One of his major goals is to acquaint himself with all segments of the university, making it almost impossible for anyone to keep him in one place for a very long time.

Unfortunately, I was able to ask Newman only a few rather trivial questions. His answers were long and adequate, but for lack of time, I was unable to delve further into the "Newman Consciousness." I was disillusioned, yet impressed, for Frank Newman, the eighth president of the University of Rhode Island, is a great person. During the entirety of our interview, his presence overwhelmed the room. He got up, gestured with his hands, thoroughly answered my questions, and yet looked and acted interested in the photographer and myself. A man who worked extensively in public relations, Newman surely knows how to deal with people, particularly in ways that would flatter them. But his interest seemed genuine, if such authenticity of a personality can be measured. Frank Newman shines with confidence, and a happy, youthful disposition. And it's catchy. When he enters a room, everyone else in it is swept up by it.

I walked out of the interview unimpressed with his demanding schedule, but impressed and in awe of the man. Yet, without a demanding schedule, he would not be doing his job.

This year, Frank Newman became acquainted with nearly every facet of the university, from having coffee with picketing state workers to playing Sunday afternoon touch football with students.

At the same time, his handling of "crises" facing the school this year was cause for optimism amongst those who would be affected by his action.

Newman was previously Director of University Relations at Stanford University. He gained national recognition when, from 1969 until 1973, he headed two federal task forces that criticized American higher education and proposed changes in the system. The findings of the task force were published in The Newman Reports. He was chosen for the URI post after a 6-month search by an eleven-member committee. 389 applications were reviewed. He succeeds Dr. Werner A. Baum, who resigned last year to become Chancellor at the Milwaukee campus of the University of Wisconsin.

Newman unofficially took over on August here at URI, and since then has been faced with problems involving a tight budget, unions, students, and even toilets.

Although he has not tried to revamp the entire system of the university, Newman has made major contributions and changes. His fast-paced, open style has made progress work at a slower pace, but at the same time, it has worked in his favor, putting more trust in the administration, and giving him the label of good listener. More than ever, students and administration have worked together to solve problems.

Among his major contributions this year, Newman took part in teacher union negotiations early in the year. His help was greatly appreciated.

In addition, it was announced that the University faced a $1-million deficit in its budget. For the academic year 1975-76, a 22.8% budget increase was asked for. The Board of Regents cut the budget request to 10.8%, and later, Governor Noel cut it to an insignificant 1%.

With no other alternatives left open, Newman then set up his Budget Task Force. The force was a small working group comprising members of the administration, that not only looked for methods in which to stay within next year's budget, but that searched for the university's priorities, education-wise. The emphasis was on open debate — a way of including both students and faculty in the decision-making. All recommendations by the task force were made public, open forums were held for the voicing of all opinions, and affected academic departments were given a chance to respond to proposals.

Among the proposals made by the task force this year were a reduction of the budget for athletic scholarships, dropping the master's program in Philosophy, phasing out the Department of home economics or incorporating it into other departments, and increasing budgets and benefits for the theater department.

Frank Newman has also been met with debate and disillusion on the part of various minority groups on campus. In response, he announced toward the end of the year an Affirmative Action Plan, in which he promised future admissions of over 3% minority students. He also called for an end to discriminatory practices on the part of down-the-line landlords, and established a 6-member Equal Educational Opportunity Council.

On December 4, more than four months after taking over, Newman was officially inaugurated. The "Inauguration Celebration" activities, like the man they honored, were less pompous than usual, and more fun.

Frank Newman is reminiscent of John Kennedy. He is a charismatic, youthful and intellectual leader. He is full of life. He loves sports, he loves using his mind, and he loves people who love using their minds, a la The Best And The Brightest. He is both the scholarly academician and the embarrassed little boy. He attends social functions and becomes the life of the party, but he hates pompous ceremonies in his honor, and enjoys walking around campus alone now and then — to think.

The University of Rhode Island needs a man like Frank Newman. The concensus is that he is welcome to stay.

"Deposit Your Cars Here"

Getting up at 6:30, dreary-eyed driving, fighting for a parking space and finally finding one at Fine Arts with one minute to get to an 8:00 class in Quinn — this is ritual of the commuter, the student whose livelihood depends upon the condition of his car, the amount of gas money in his pocket, and the amount of give-or-take in his temper.

At least there is a Commuter's Lounge where these martyrs can take a snooze, watch TV, play cards or study. The Commuter's Association, which runs the lounge, provides lockers to members, commuter car pool systems, and parties for the sake of diversion.

An association like this is essential on a campus in which commuters comprise almost half the student population, with the number of down-the-line students increasing every semester.

Why do they do it? To get away from the campus at night, to save money, to be able to live alone, in peace. Perhaps the rest of the headaches are worth it.

Dear Mr. Policeman,
What have you done to me?
I thought I parked my car here,
But now, where can it be?

I was late this morning
For my English class,
I know where I'm supposed to park,
But I had to get there fast.

Why'd you do it to me?
It was only there for a minute.
Where'd it go? Did you tow?
How did you break in it?

You know, I used to see you
Putting tickets on the cars,
You even hit mine a few times,
Just who do you think you are?

Is it just that you have time on your hands,
And you can't find things to do?
No arrests, no murders here,
Nothing big for you?

I'm really sorry, officer,
You're not solely to blame.
It just looks like you enjoy it,
When on each ticket you sign your name.

I know you're doing your job, sir,
It's the priorities of this school,
Now I'll go down to the towing garage,
And I promise to play it cool.

Just remember one thing, dear sir,
You're getting paid for your job.
I have to pay to come here, yet
Without me, you'd have no one to rob.

— Evelyn Short

Note: Ms. Short is a commuter and has accumulated a number of parking tickets. She has also had her car towed after parking it in a restricted area for a half hour. She and many others like her are infuriated by the paradoxical parking system at URI. She believes that students, who pay to attend college, should have first priority, and should be able to park closer to the center of campus than those who are paid for their services here. She also believes that a shuttle bus service should serve staff members, because their working hours are more rigid than the hours of students.

Dear Editor:

I am absolutely appalled at the swiftness with which this campus is losing its sense of dignity and culture. The last straw has finally come: the URI bookstore has moved all the pornographic magazines to the front of the store, so that they can no longer be perused at one's leisure.

Greek Life

GREEK LIFE

Along with its dormitories and Grad student apartments, down the line commuters, and commuters from other nearby towns, URI also has Greek residences on campus. All together there are fifteen fraternity houses and nine sorority houses outlining the campus boundaries. These individual houses designated by their various Greek letters are united by the Inter-Fraternity Council for men and the Panhellenic Council for women. These two councils are the governing bodies of the Greek system. Their office is on the third floor of the student union where they hold regular office hours. The IFC holds meetings here with representatives from each fraternity every other Thursday night. Richard D'Alfonso of Theta Chi was the president of IFC this year. Chuck Caverretta was executive vice-president and Larry Berman was the internal vice-president. The IFC's main objective each year is to join together the members of each Greek house in a common bond of brotherhood and sisterhood.

Sororities and fraternities hold many socials and get-togethers with each other. Spring weekends toward the end of the school year and before the turmoil of final exams, are always filled with picnics, games, dances, etc. to ease the monotony of studying. One of the main events in the Greek year is Greek week. This is a week in spring full of fun activities open to the entire campus by the Greek community. These activities include pie-eating, chariot racing, beer-chugging, throwing softball, tri-cycle and rollerskating races, etc. Also, movies are shown in the union, a clothing drive is sponsored by the fraternities and sororities all week, and guest lectures are open to the university students.

Greek life is not entirely fun and games, however. There are certain hours each night according to the individual houses during which no loud music or partying is permitted, so that the students can study in peace. However, the advantage of living in a house structure rather than a dorm is that even during the course of the day when people come and go constantly there is always a quiet corner to be found where no one will disturb your studying.

Sororities and fraternities here at URI are often seen behind a booth in the Student Union raising money for the needy. This philanthropic spirit is common among everyone who is involved in the Greek system.

Greek life is a very fulfilling life of fun, experience with people in many different situations, self-discipline during study hours, responsibilities, leadership, and many happy memories accumulated during these "good old college days."

LITTLE BROTHER — LITTLE SISTER

The street —
a cold, hard,
unthing
giving nothing of itself.

A child —
needing love, understanding,
a guiding hand,
a pleasant smile.

All alone he walks the street,
following its twisting path,
stumbling over the cold,
jutting surface
searching for some kind of recognition in a stranger's eyes.

MTN

The role of a Big Brother or Sister is to be a friend to a child. It is as simple as that. There are over one hundred students on the URI campus who, through spending a few hours a week with a little boy or girl, have enriched their own lives and provided a listening ear and a doorway to new places and new experiences for an underprivileged child.

In becoming a big brother or sister to a child between the ages of five and twelve, one need only be only considerate, responsible, and sincerely interested in the personal growth of that child. Being a friend to a little brother or sister is an opportunity to really contribute a part of oneself to another person on a one-to-one relationship. The students involved in such a relationship have found that they have gotten to know themselves better through their weekly contacts with their little friends.

The program is allotted a van by the Student Senate so that besides individual activities members can share experiences with each other as a group during trips to places such as the battleship Massachusetts, Edaville Railroad, and the Boston Museum of Science. These events promote unity among all members.

The program offers a student the opportunity to become involved in the community life outside the utopia labeled the University of Rhode Island.

Bill Whitehead was editor-in-chief of the Good 5¢ Cigar during this past academic year.

Providing the campus community with news coverage of University affairs is a difficult task for the Cigar since interests at URI range from zionism to necrophilia (not implying that the two are extremes or even incompatible).

The Cigar operated last year hampered by a perennial problem: a lack of consensus as to the exact direction that a student newspaper should follow and to whom it should cater. Some campus organizations consider themselves to be the intellectual center of the Universe, and they feel that the Cigar should reflect that in its pages. To them, the Every Other Wednesday Afternoon Tea and Tickle of the Young Podiatrists is a function well worthy of note in the Cigar.

Another option that could be chosen is the sensationalist route. Indeed, numerous students' sole interest is in macabre tales of a professor being beaten by her department chairman with the left hind leg of a donkey and the like. However, such occurrences are relatively infrequent to support a biweekly publication.

There is another problem that contributes to an identity problem at the Cigar. It receives half of its funds from the Student Senate and operates out of a University building. Therefore, both the Senate and the administration have the potential power to interrupt the newspaper's publication.

The Cigar's Problems can only be solved by its eventual evolution to autonomy. Until then, the Cigar continues to work with what it has — staffwise and Universitywise.

WINTER THEATRE

The Fine Arts came alive; stagecrafts was jokingly referred to as slavecrafts, and backstage crews were often busy building two sets simultaneously. The University of Rhode Island suddenly supported and confirmed the idea that the most exciting experimentation was happening right here, in our own department.

Someone finally adopted the bastard child, and in eloquent style, fashioned it back to working order.

U.R.I. BASKETBALL

B. Fuesz

"Through it all, I am very pleased with the way the team pulled together in the last half of the season, and not only played as a unit, but also learned a lot about the game which will certainly stand us in good stead next year."

That was Coach Jack Kraft of the University of Rhode Island commenting, as his team finished its 1974-75 basketball campaign with five victories in its last 11 games. Of the six defeats in that string, two were in overtime and two by the combined total of only three points.

What started out as a season filled with adversity, finished as a campaign that showed steady progress and gives bright hope for the future. During the latter stretches of the season, Kraft started three freshmen, a sophomore and a junior, all of whom return next year.

B. Fuesz

Of the four young freshmen who came to Kingston last fall as an integral part of Kraft's second-year of rebuilding the hoop program at Kingston, Jim "Jiggy" Williamson of New Haven, CT; Stanley Wright of New York City, and Randy Wilds of Miami, FLA; formed the nucleus of starters, along with sophomore Mark Cizynski of Westport, CT and junior Carlton Smith of Boston, which came on strong at the end of the season.

"Learning to play together and getting our defenses down pat were two of the factors that led to the team's early-season woes," is the way Kraft put it. "These young men had to learn each other's moves, and it's just got to take time for anyone to absorb a new system and to make it work during a game situation."

Rhody fans had to wait seven weeks for the first Ram triumph, which came in the 15th game of the season. URI lost its first four contests, when Kraft made a critical move, which stirred much controversy. Kraft cut from the squad three seniors, Randy

Hughes, Jerry Minetti, and Larry Levane. Hughes was the leading scorer and rebounder the season before while both Minetti and Levane saw much action.

Kraft said the decision was made because he was looking to the future, and wanted to play his freshmen. He said he didn't want to "humiliate" his seniors by sitting them on the bench.

Ten games went by after the cuts until the Rams finally won, trouncing New Hampshire by 20 points. The rest of the way, the Rams stayed in with everybody and played well. Although URI finished 5-20 overall and 3-7 in the Yankee Conference, everyone is looking ahead to next year when the entire starting team returns. A pair of great victories also encouraged many fans.

The season's highlight victory was URI's solid 79-69 win over Providence College at the Providence Civic Center in the team's second meeting of the season. It was the first Ram victory over a Friar five since 1972 and the first for Kraft over PC in four games since coming to Kingston in 1973. Another high point for the young Rams was their 89-83 win over Manhattan at Kingston in early February, the first victory over the Jaspers in three seasons.

Williamson, the six-foot point guard and former Wilbur Cross High All-American, emerged as the team's offensive leader, finishing the season on top in eight categories, including most points (374) and highest scoring average (15.0). In addition, he "ran" the club well, averaged 38 minutes of playing per game, highest on the team, and was the only player to start all 25 games.

Three seniors are due to graduate, including co-captains Bill Bird, and Nelson Lopes plus Noel Taylor. Bird, used mostly in a reserve role this season, scored 217 points in his two years as a varsity performer. Lopes, who also came off the bench this year, had 333 points in his pair of varsity campaigns.

Taylor, the type of player who time and again came into a game as a substitute to spark Rhody rallies, scored 229 points in his two years at URI after coming to the Rams as a junior college transfer in 1973.

— Larry Berman

WRESTLING

A pair of outstanding wrestlers, both juniors, represented URI in the 1975 NCAA championships at Princeton, N.J. Scott Pucino of Coventry, RI, and Tadd Sargent of Annadale, VA, each won New England championships, qualifying for the nationals.

Pucino won his first two matches in the NCAA's, but lost in the third round to the two time defending NCAA champ. Sargent lost in the opening round.

Pucino had an unbelievable season for URI. The three-time New England and Yankee Conference 126-pound titlist finished 30-6 for the campaign with ten pins, racked up 16 straight victories, two major titles and is now 67-11 for his career, an alltime record for the most wins by a Ram wrestler. And to top it off, he received the Leathers Trophy as most valuable wrestler in the 1975 New England competition, and recorded the fastest pin of the tournament, a 35-second fall in the semi-finals over Mike Hudson of Maine, his own personal record-time for a pin, for which he was awarded the Serra Trophy.

Sargent almost paralleled the diminutive Pucino, scoring 24 victories against eight losses and a tie last year, including six pins, while upping his career mark to 37-20-4. The 190-pound New England title was the first for Sargent. He has won the Yankee Conference championship for two straight years.

Rhode Island, finishing the season 12-8 in dual competition, tying its alltime record for most dual meet victories in a season, has won 46 while losing only 19 over the last four years. The Rams placed second this season to Boston University for both the New England championship and the Yankee Conference title. Rhode Island was the defending champion for both titles.

Seniors who finished their careers for the Rams included Stu Horowitz, a two-time New England and one-time YanCon 177-pound champion who compiled a 36-13-5 career record; and co-captain Ray Miro, who won the Conference heavyweight title last season, finishing up the year with a 30-15-2 career mark.

Rams who will be back next season for Coach Alan Nero include junior John Richard (158) who had a record of 15-10-2; freshman Mike Willner (142) and freshman Frank Pucino, Scott's younger brother, who finished his initial season with a 7-4 record despite being hobbled with an injury most of the year.

Nero, named New England coach-of-the-year for the 1973 and 1974 seasons, has compiled a 32-15 dual meet record since taking over the Ram head coaching reins three years ago. In that span, his teams won two YanCon titles and were runners-up this season, while tying for the New England crown and placing second, twice.

sorry, fella.

there may be few answers,
there may be so many questions, but i have made up my mind.
marriage is a non-entity.
i refuse to become a bitch.
i don't want to ruin any children and your life.

i know now something i thought would never come to me.

the realization that marriage is a no-where thing hurts like hell. i know.

but i can see the fear of the century written in your young eyes.

the fear that we will end up like those around us, everywhere sick.
unhappy.

unsatisfied. resentful.
if i ever made you walk like a damned gawk —

down an alter in front of your sneering friends,
i would never live it

down.
to myself.

so be single. with me
sometimes.
and love just may never die.

1975-76: A GOOD YEAR FOR GOOD MOODS

Editor's Note: Margaret Scott, Associate Dean of Students, worked with me to compile a rather general outlook about the 'mood' on the URI campus this past academic year.

This essay is a result of research by Ms. Scott about the 'moods' on campus in past years. She attributes the varied 'characters' of past generations of students to world events during each time period, and to the extent of social awareness evident during each generation.

This essay, however, is not necessarily how it is. It must be stressed that our opinions are not universal. Yet, we have come to our conclusions in the most cohesive way we feel possible in discussing as intangible a subject as a mood.

It seems as if the mood on campus this year was one of tentative optimism. A new president of the university came to office in August. In addition, a new U.S. President had just previously been appointed. Both men gave those they led a rallying sorely needed at the time.

In the 1950's and 60's, students were less aware of world events and presidents. They were more occupied at the time with what seems now to have been social trivialities. The Association of Women Students had an elaborate system of rules and regulations which determined life styles for men and women, which saw little revision during these years. Curfews, signing in and out, special late permission, etc., were reviewed and re-established by groups of leaders each year. Social life revolved around sororities and fraternities. World- and nation-wide events had little impact on students. McCarthy and the Red Scare did not affect students in college. Many of them were the first in their families to be earning degrees. Thus, the school tended to be an incubator, keeping all within safe and sound from outside threats. They tended to look at success in terms of a good, well-paying job and a grey flannel suit.

Slowly, here at URI and at other colleges, regulations began to be lifted, and students began to become more involved and interested in decision-making.

Among other progressive moves, a sex information program was adopted, and a policy requiring coats, ties, and skirts at dinner was abolished.

That's just a sampling of the changes that occurred, particularly during the sixties. Colleges across the nation during this period were awakening, and asking, then demanding their rights. At the same time, John Kennedy, the youthful leader to whom many young people and minorities looked to for support, was in office. The disillusionment that followed his assassination led to more student strikes, sit-ins, and riots.

It wasn't until 1970 that URI participated in a student sit-in. The period was one of an exciting, invigorating campus mood. All students were concerned for the first time about the plight of the masses. There was a new wave of a caring for humanity. The Big Brother-Big Sister group was formed at this time.

Then Lyndon Baines Johnson and the Vietnam War. A credibility gap was formed, not just between students and authority, but also between middle-class America and authority. And URI represented the sons and daughters of the middle-class.

And yet, confrontation slowed to a halt as time passed. The Kent State killings made students, including those here at URI, stop and think twice about violence as a vehicle for change.

Recently, students have lived through the dictatorship of Richard Nixon and his ill-fated administration. The disclosure of corruption in the highest office of the country has led many to run from reality, but has also forced many to seek change, through peaceful means. Many students have switched majors to Political Science and Journalism, in an effort to change the system from within.

The events of the past attribute to a feeling of skepticism among the young. Yet, the cynical outlook is a healthy one, allowing only the truth to make any kind of impression on them. At the same time, URI students are hopeful, like many people, that time will heal all wounds and that, led by good men, truth and honor will prevail.

SKIN DIVERS CLUB

THE URI SKIN DIVERS

Last year was the URI Skin Divers Club's 17th year, since its founding in 1958 when the sport of skin diving was in its infancy. In the beginning, the club was the real skin diving club, meaning there was no SCUBA diving, only snorkeling and spearfishing. However, the club has changed considerably over the years. Now skin diving has all but been replaced by SCUBA diving and spearfishing has been replaced by night, boat, wreck, and bottle diving, as well as saltwater tropical fish collecting, underwater photography and just plain underwater exploring.

Last year was one of the best years that the club has ever had. Membership was up and more importantly, activity was increased. Over 50 open water club dives were organized with over 250 man hours of bottom time recorded in out-club diving logs. Club dives were held every week, right through the winter. However, for those club members who didn't particularly enjoy diving during the winter when the water temperature was in the 30's and 40's, the club offered other alternatives.

At every club meeting, held on Wednesdays in the Union, a dive film or speaker was featured. A total of 14 films were shown which included, "The Silent Warrior," "Beneath Grand Cayman Waters," and a 90 minute feature film, "Deadly Fathoms." The club also sponsored 8 speakers, some of which included Al Davis, who spoke on "The Salvage of Revolutionary War Vessels in Narragansett Bay," Wes Pratt, who spoke on "Sharks in Narragansett Bay," and John McAniff, who spoke on "Diving Safety."

The club also sponsored four major events last year. The first was the 16th annual New England Collegiate Dive, in which URI invited universities and colleges from all over New England to a dive weekend at Castle Hill, Newport. The second event last year was a trip to the famed Boston Sea Rovers Underwater Convention. The club's third major event was a trip to the Florida Keys during the Easter break. This was the first time the club had ever sponsored such a trip, and it was very successful. In all probability, it will become an annual event.

The club has acquired a substantial amount of diving equipment over the years which is loaned out to members at no charge. The club owns 12 sets of tanks and regulators as well as U/W lights, B/C's and diver's flags. Membership is free and open to all URI students, whether you want to dive or just want to learn.

SPRING THEATRE

The theater is alive and well and residing in our own little Kingston community. The surprising element is that the audience reacted like a hungry youngster, and filled either of the two performing studios for every show of every play.

What was the attraction? Was it the old and tragic Greek drama of Antigone? Or was it the strange idea that someone could actually make an entertaining yet powerful musical about the '68 takeover in Prague?

Perhaps it was the balance that was achieved this year by the Theater Department by performing some of the old, and some of the new. Maybe it was the experience of the experimental merging with the traditional. Any way or method you choose to define success for the theater, one idea is realized for what it is.

The theater in Rhode Island has firmly made the statement that direction for the performing arts in the seventies is not impossible to find.

The Departure

This good-bye is final,
an official change in status.
With one less veil between me and world
perhaps those nights of burning midnight oil will allow me to see more clearly by my own light.
Forced now to move from learning under duress to a more personal search
I must give, sell or file away all these books-:
grey the heart that cannot sense
the life-force at the root of words.
And the words themselves, constrained by their context;
they too conditioned by emphasis upon the linear.
All these books-: hours absorbed in the mind of others.
Is this the intent of well-rounded education?
The arc of that giving is slow to return.

Dear alma mater, you appear to be the fat depraved mistress of a miser, unfamiliar with your own body,
still afraid to touch those inner parts that might carry you the far side of reason —

You, full of knowledge and so void of wisdom, have given me your imprint, made me part of your family.
I long to forget our secret handshakes,
deeds done in the darkness of a classroom,
cheating to get a grade.
You bent me to your will
as if you were the boy in Frost's poem and I the stubborn birch. You, shape-changing god, goddess, demon.
The faces on this campus wear, at times,
one expression, your mood our momentary season;
at semester's end the players untune their instruments rise from their seats and leave the stage where your demands fade in the air like notes when a concert is done.
Receptive to the coming music, no longer a student of elemental fascinations,
I listen attentively for the moment's approach
when I regain custody of the child you have adopted,
my attention,
which you held as if it were your own.

What have we here?

I do believe that this year Renaissance will give a brief and long overdue explanation of what exactly it is, does, and says. A yearbook can have a multitude of purposes and can say things in many different ways. For URI, the yearbook has always been a summary, the epitome of the past year for both seniors and the underclassmen. I have seen, however, that its message in past years has been disastrously lost in interpretation by all but a few of the more open-minded. Thus, it is time to put the 1974-75 Renaissance into a more understandable perspective for all.

The eastern region of the United States, or more specifically the northeast, has always been the birthplace of unique and creative college yearbooks. URI is no exception, having in the past expressed the years in interesting, creative perspectives, shapes and styles. For those who experienced it, the 1972 book stepped farthest into the realm of the unique, and the response to this endeavor indicated that the campus community certainly was not ready for such a creative change. Whether a yearbook is the place to be so avant-garde remains to be seen, but it is true that the book set the stage for the future at URI.

And now, after three years of experience working on this book, the past two as editor, the money, business, technical, political, and personal hassles I have gone through in producing a book for the students of URI have been many. There are a few things which must be said for my sake and yours.

This year's Renaissance has a reason for being the way it is. It is organized with a certain goal in mind and everything in the book is aimed at that goal. Start from the beginning of the book. Like the pictures in the introduction? Or maybe only the literature? There is a message in that introduction, if you read the pictures with the literature. I won't tell you what it is; I want you to read it yourselves. The book also has been divided into seasons, which gives it a structure identifiable with the year. This is also true of the photographs. Get into them and read them, separately or in groups, and they will promote a feeling, or tell a story. Renaissance has always been a photographic book, and unlike many other schools, we use literature to accent the pictures. This year is no different, so when you read the copy, read the photos along with them and you'll find that the book will (hopefully) mean a bit more to you when you finish it.

One other thing that you should notice about this book is the quality. I have always been a freak for doing things the best way, and this book is done to the best ability of all involved in producing it. All black and white pictures are black and white, not gray. By spot varnishing, the blacks are intensified, while the whites stay white. Agfa Brovira paper was used almost exclusively for all black and white prints, which I feel gives the richest total reproduction. The black and white film used was mostly the old faithful — tri. X, rated anywhere from ASA320 to 1800. Color film was also Kodak, Kodachrome II for warm colors, and Ektachrome (high speed) for greens and blues or for taking color shots when we shouldn't have been. The photographers also must be given credit for a job well done. It is not easy to find good photographers on this campus — either they're into the fine arts aspect and can't comprehend working with a deadline, or they wear a camera, the sole purpose of which is to call themselves photographers. To them a hymn for him. Unfortunately, you need not only a camera, but also the eye to use it. But out of the bleakness of mid 1st semester shined a few good eyes and to them, their skill and dedication, I must say thank you.

To make this book happen, there were a few fine people who I must acknowledge with a word of thanks for helping me get the book moving when help was needed. Paul Brindamour, who hates yearbooks, has been indispensable as a reference point for most of my business, money and typewriter problems. He is a great guy, I mean, he's gotta be, he owns a van, too, next in helping me produce a 1st rate book all the way is John Levis. A fine man — he's one of the few people who I can believe when they talk business. Thank you, Sheila, Linda and Denise for helping me type up the final deadline material when everyone else had an excuse. I'd also like to thank Stephen Andrade, Stu Blazer, Avi Ostrowsky and the scores of other fine and talented contributors who cared enough to give us their time and talent.

And now a dedication to the dedicated — the ones to whom Renaissance means more than just a yearly documentary. As the year progressed, it became evident who the ones were, who I would see in June still typing, writing, printing and generally putting out for this book. To them a most sincere congratulations, for we were only four days late for our final deadline! It was a good year, and may the book be everything you wanted it to be and more.

And for me, it was a long year, a good year, and one of the best for Renaissance. I just want to thank everyone who helped me achieve what I set out to do, everyone who was there when I needed them and Glen Gardner for being with me always.

I hope you enjoy reading the Renaissance as much as I have enjoyed working for it. If you don't, come down and talk about it.

Have a good year.
